What can you do to keep violent radicalization from happening?
How can you play an active role in this increasingly vital social struggle? The answer lies mainly in prevention, which involves education. To prevent radicalization, we need to understand it as a complex phenomenon and know how to recognize warning signs in people's behaviours. Then we need appropriate and consistent ways of addressing it. To meet this need, the Centre for the Prevention of Radicalization Leading to Violence (CPRLV) has developed a series of practical training courses for front-line workers as well as individuals in the legal, public security and education systems, and public and private organizations.

Courses Offered

- GENERAL INTRODUCTION TO RADICALIZATION LEADING TO VIOLENCE
- FRONT-LINE WORKERS
- PRISON PROFESSIONALS
- PUBLIC AND PRIVATE ORGANIZATIONS
- EDUCATION PROFESSIONALS
- EDUCATION PROFESSIONALS AND YOUTH WORKERS
- HEXAGON: INTERDISCIPLINARY ANALYSIS OF SITUATIONS OF POTENTIALLY VIOLENT RADICALIZATION

Overall learning goal

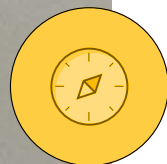

After completing a course given by the Centre for the Prevention of Radicalization Leading to Violence (CPRLV), participants should be in a position to:

Use the knowledge acquired during the course to respond appropriately to situations of potentially violent radicalization in their workplaces.

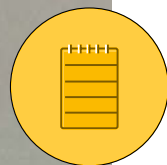

Our training workshops involve interactive presentations, hands-on activities, case studies, small- and large-group discussions and videos. At the end of the course, participants will have acquired new knowledge and new skills leading them to:

Understand what radicalization leading to violence actually is.

Recognize behaviours associated with violent radicalization and the risk and protective factors for vulnerable individuals.

Take appropriate preventive action in accordance with best practices and professional codes of conduct.

Leverage the complementarity of the skills and expertise in the community to support prevention and intervention.

THE EDUCATOR'S GUIDE "WHAT IF I WAS WRONG"

is designed to assist anyone who wants to become a key player in primary prevention for young people. Developed in collaboration with the Canadian Commission for UNESCO as part of the "What if I Was Wrong?" awareness campaign, it is intended as a practical awareness-raising tool to foster attitudes that contribute to resilience in the face of violent radicalization: a pluralistic worldview, critical thinking skills, and tolerance of opposing ideas, values or beliefs, among others. With 19 activities, the guide offers school and community stakeholders practical activities to strengthen the resilience of young people aged 13 to 25, all through an experiential learning model. This training aims to facilitate the adoption of primary prevention activities by the various youth workers.

Specific objectives :

- Understand the different attitudes to be promoted in order to prevent radicalization leading to violence and hate crimes
- Adopt concrete tools to prevent radicalization leading to violence and hate acts
- Enrich group facilitation skills
- Increase ease in dealing with sensitive topics through experiential learning activities
- Raise awareness on the prevention of radicalization leading to violence and hate acts

Target audience :

Community workers, youth leaders, high school and college teachers

Hexagon: Interdisciplinary analysis of situations of potentially violent radicalization

#7

HEXAGON

In the course of their professional duties, people in a variety of fields – education, social services, law enforcement and the criminal justice system, to name just a few – may face and have to deal with situations of radicalization potentially leading to violence. The complexity and fluid character of these kinds of situation require input from a diversity of experts in order to successfully disengage individuals from the path of violence.

Although an effective strategy in this context is to pool together a variety of expertise, it's not easy to do so. That's why the CPRLV and the Roméo Dallaire Child Soldiers Initiative jointly created an instructional tool – Hexagon – for this specific purpose. This tool can be used to apply the various perspectives required to successfully manage potentially violent radicalization situations. With the help of the Hexagon tool, it is possible to explore the overall situation more clearly by considering all its facets: contextual, the individual's living environment, behaviour (both prosocial and concerning), vulnerability and protective factors, and the social actors who may be called on as part of a preventive strategy.

With such an interdisciplinary overview, it is possible to use all the skills and resources required to develop an individualized service plan that addresses the radicalized individual's needs and realities.

Course offered:
Throughout Quebec

Numbers:
35 participants/
group (Max.)

Approach:
Case studies,
scenarios and discussion

Time:
3 1/2 HOURS

Prerequisite

The course: 2., 3., 4., 5.

Specific objectives

After completing this training, participants should be in a position to:

- Understand how to use the Hexagon tool in analyzing situations of potentially violent radicalization;
- Analyze, in working groups, situations of potentially violent radicalization;
- Design an individualized service plan for someone who could be in a situation of potentially violent radicalization.

Target audience

Intervenor, social workers, community workers, psychologists, healthcare professionals, educational professionals, prison professionals, law-enforcement professionals, teachers and researchers.

We encourage multidisciplinary groups to take this training in order to get the most out of the learning experience.

Registration and Information
